VICTORY IN CHELSEA

The Beverly Y. M. C. A. new building fund campaigners, encouraged by Chelsea's success, today begin active work on a systematic canvass of the people of the city to raise $100,000 for a home for the local Y. M. C. A., over 200 public spirited men having enrolled for the campaign. The workers in the Chelsea Y. M. C. A. campaign concluded their canvass Tuesday evening when it was announced that the total subscriptions had passed the desired $66,000 mark and the sum of $71,008 had been subscribed.

Before the campaign in Beverly opened this morning it was announced that Melville Woodbury, chairman of the business mens committeee, had started the work with a subscription of $10,000. In addition Mrs. Susan W. Trask gave $7000 and Mrs. Sarah W. Clark $3000, making $20,000 in all as the nucleus of the $60,-000 which the campaigners expect to raise among the citizens of the place. The other $40,000 necessary to complete the desired $100,000 it is expected will be subscribed by the summer residents of Beverly. President Taft has already started this part of the contributions with a check for $100.

At the final meeting of the Chelsea compaigners Tuesday evening the busiess men's and young men's committees eported-amounts for the last day's work which brought the total subscriptions to $61,825, $4175 less than the $66,000 Somerville, Brookline and they were seeking. The men immedi-Revere Due for Addresses ately set to work to raise the balance and, with the help of the women of the Y. M. C. A. auxiliary, the total was raised in a few hours to $71,008.

COLONY PROJECTED FOR NEWFOUNDLAND BY SALVATION ARMY

Organization Plans to Place Emigrants on Farms and Sites Are to Be Inspected Today.

SERVICES IN DEMAND

ST. JOHNS, N. F. - The Salvation Army plans to establish farm colonies in Newfoundland in connection with its emigration department.

A representative of the Salvation Army is in Newfoundland conferring with the government officials. A tour, beginning today, has been arranged for him through the country believed to include the most likely sites for settle-

It is possible that the work of laying out the colony will be begun in the spring. This is the time of the year when the army's emigrant department has the most recruits and they could be greatly useful in building their future

This project for the utilization of Newfoundland's vast unoccupied interior will deflect from Canada's Northwest and from the maritime provinces the great volume of immigration which annually comes from England, Scotland and Ireland

This tide of immigration averages be tween 5000 and 10,000 persons each year, and there has been a great demand for their services.

SUBWAY MAY SOLVE CAIRO PROBLEM IN TRANSPORTATION

Short Bore to Connect Suburban Lands Under Supervision of State Railways Department.

MAY EXTEND LINE CONCORD PUBLISHING COMPANY

Special to The Monitor CAIRO. Egypt The subway has enered into the solution of the Cairo transportation problem, although on a limited scale. One about 17 meters wide is being constructed to connect some suburban lands lying between the Matarich line and the Ismalia canal with the Sharia Abbas. Hitherto a grade crossing has been maintained at this point, but on account of the heavy traffic on the Matarieh line, and of the approaching completion of the Cairo-Heliopolis elecric railway, it has been found necessary to replace the crossing by a subway.

The subway, which is being constructed under the direct supervision of the state railways department, is situated at Demerdache, at a point about three kilometers from the central station, Cairo, and it is hoped that the work will be completed by July, 1910. The work necessitates the temporary di. version of the Matarieh line for a disance of about 800 meters. The masonry will be faced with artificial cement blocks, which will give a handsome finished appearance to the work, and are stronger and more resisting than the ordinary limestone from the Mokattam hills, besides being more economical. Sheeting has been used to make the subway watertight, this being necessary as the level of the road is about one and a half meters below high water in filtration level.

It is understood to be part of the plan. that the Cairo tramways system is to be extended eventually from the existing terminus at Ghamrah, through the subvay, in order to furnish rapid transit beween Cairo and Shakour Pasha's estate. Construction operations on the Heliopolis Electric railway are progressing rapidly. This line will run from the Pont imoun station, and, following the Sharia Abbas, keep parallel to the Matarich line almost as far as the village of Manchiet el-Sadre. Just before the village is reached the line will make a turn to the right, and run past the back of the parade ground at Abbassia, under the existing carriage road from Cairo to investigator, Dr. Otto Froedin, has Mattarieh, and through the desert to the George W. Gale Lumber Co.

run special trains through direct to the Heliopolis hotel. Thus it will be possible for passengers and baggage to be conveyed without changing from the steamer quays at Alexandria or Port Said to the Oasis.

efficiency in Public Service as Waste and Decries Careless Expenditure.

NEW HAVEN, Conn. - Governor Hughes in the second of the lectures on the "Responsibilities of Citizenship," at Yale, said that if there were no reason for insisting upon efficiency in govern ment administration it should be enough to point out that the cost of government was increasing at a tremendous rate.

"Inefficiency," he said, "is simply waste of public money. Waste which loads down a budget with unnecessary appropriations and stands in the way needed public improvements pro vokes discontent. If we are to have contentented comunities and be free from disorder we must stop extravagance and careless expenditure. A community well governed, in the sense that reasonable mounts derived by taxation are faithfully and intelligently expended, will almost inevitably be a community of order

Upon the Ballinger statement of the facts President Taft wrote his letter sustaining Mr. Ballinger. It is understood that before this action was taken former Secretary Garfield offered to put the President in possession of his (Garfield's) version of the Alaskan cases if Mr. Taft should desire it. The matter went no further at that time.

Now it is known through the medium of White House gossip that Mr. Gar field, having waited in vain for a request to send in his statement, has sent it in anyhow.

IN THE REALMS OF MUSIC

Governor Hughes Defines In- James J. Hill Declares the IN Symphony hall Tuesday afternoon Sergei Rachmaninoff played in piano High Cost of Living and recital the following program of his own Individual Extravagance compositions: Sonate, D minor, op. 28; allegro moderato, lento, allegro vivace; Melodie; Humoresque; Barcarolle; Polichinell; four preludes, D major, D minor, C minor, C sharp minor.

If Rachmaninoff had appeared in Boston as a pianist and nothing else he might have called out a full sized Symphony hall audience; but he chose to come primarily as a composer, and therefore those who went to hear him were chiefly such as wished the man who wrote the C sharp minor prelude to give them further account of himself as a musical thinker. Those to whom a piano recital means a briffiant interpretation of a Beethoven or a Brahms sonata, of two or three Chopin nocturnes, of a little Debussy piece and of a Liszt rhapsody were not tempted by Mr. Rachmaninoff's announcement of a program of his own

But Mr. Rachmaninoff's audience was not small even for Symphony hall, and it was thoroughly hospitable to any new ideas the composer might bring forward. Mr. Rachmaninoff's listeners perhaps found that new and great ideas were scarce in these piano works of his, but they must have got the impression of being in the presence of a serene, clearheaded musician; they must have felt that he was not too much bound to traditional formulas of expression, though they must have noticed that he had certain conventions of his own which he obeyed pretty strictly.

TWO PLANS PRESENTED GIVING COUNTRY HOMES TO THE POOR

Representative Norman H. White of Brookline and Orlando D. Norcross of Worcester Are Sponsors.

Representative Norman H. White of Brookline and Orlando O. Norcross of Worcester presented two plans to the BIG RETURN ASSURED homestead commission Tuesday persons living in congested city districts may be assisted in securing homes of their own in the open country. in the cotton belt this year by reason Both plans were very similar, except in Representative White proposed that the state buy as much land as is necessary properly to try the experiment and sizes as to furnish a comfortable home for each family desiring to secure it. He recommended that applicants should pay for this land in instalments.

Such a plan, he thought, would provide ample opportunity for men with small means to own their homes, and t would be a benefit to the state as well, as the thrift which would necessarily follow such an oportunity, together with the benefit to be derived from the open air, would greatly decrease the numbers annually sent to state institutions. He would accept as applicants only en of limited income, and would make it impossible for anyone having an inome above a given amount to get such

Mr. Norcross said he looked upon this movement as about the most important Representative from Brookline who takes and far-reaching that could be entered upon by the state.

The Conservation of Human Endeavor In the estimation of thinking people it will not appear that the apology was necessary with which J. Horace McFarland, president of the American Civic Association, began his annual address before that body in Cincinnati on Monday. The expression of his desire to bring home the realization that conservation is an equally vital need when applied to human endeavor as when applied to natural resources justified his departure from the rut. In insisting that the conservation of human endeavor, which is now so often exerted for the benefit of the few, shall be henceforth exerted for the benefit of the many, he was opening a new line of thought. He illustrated his position in a manner calculated to make it easily understood. "Would there be any Standard Oil problem today." he asked, "if the energies of that vast and efficient organization had been diffused as fully as are most uplift endeavors? Would Mr. Harriman have been master of an empire of railroad power if he had diffused, and then confused, his tremendous energies instead of concentrating them?"

It will be well for those engaged in conservation work, in reform work, in uplift work, to consider seriously the point raised here by Mr. McFarland. The waste of physical force in this country today, not to go outside of our own borders, great as it is known to be, is small compared with the waste of moral force as a result of the diffusion of energy and the scattering of effort.

Men are asked to become interested and to take an active part in so many movements looking to the amelioration and improvement of existing political, economical and social conditions that in many cases before they have opportunity of becoming enthusiastic over one they become indifferent to all. In the countless efforts that are one they become indifferent to all. In the countless efforts that are being put forward to uplift humanity those that often command the earliest and largest followings are movements that mistake effect for cause.

If human endeavor were conserved, concentrated, intelligently directed, reforms that now seem remote would be speedily brought about.

The action of the American Federation of Labor on the question of industrial education a few days ago in Toronto makes clear the attitude of organized labor on this important subject. The committee in rendering its report said: "It is believed that the future welfare of America largely depends upon the industrial training of our workers. The inquiries of the committee seem to indicate that if the American workman is to maintain the standard of efficiency, the boys and girls of the country must have an opportunity to acquire educated hands such as may enable them to earn a living in a self-selected vocation." The committee goes on further to recommend the establishment of schools in connection with the public school system at which pupils between the ages of fourteen and sixteen may be taught the principles of trades by connected taughts.

To Perpetuate Our Industries

Those who desire to see our industries perpetuated on a broad scale will doubtless agree in large measure with the sentiment expressed in the report of this committee. It is generally conceded that there has been too much effort made in the past to equip our young people simply for the professions and the departments of business in which work with the hands is of minor consideration, without particular reference to the trades. Honest and skilful labor is indispensable to human progress and the one who is equipped to render skilled labor is necessarily placed on a higher plane of effort

If trade schools will furnish this equipment, and we think it has been demonstrated that they can and will, then by all means let us have manual training within the reach of every school boy or girl who manifests a disposition to follow this line of work. The elective courses in college training have long since taken the place of that which was determined by rule or rote, and it requires but a comparatively simple adaptation of the elective course plan to include in public school work the required branches of manual training. Some of the best-equipped and wisest educators in the country are earnestly at work on this problem, however, and in the light of their investigations it is apparent that enthusiasm for manual training should not be allowed to fasten any system on the country unless it exemplifies the best thought on the subject in this and other countries.

Railroad Employees and Electrification

News comes from Chicago to the effect that railroad employees who believe that electrification of terminals in that city may do away with their means of earning a livelihood are preparing "to wage a determined fight in and out of the city council" against the ordinance intended to compel electrification by subjecting the railroad companies to heavy penalties for continuing the smoke muisance. It is said that the finds of the nuisance. It is said that the funds of the brotherhoods of locomotive engineers and firemen, amounting to approximately $3,000,000, will be employed to defeat the proposition whereof the ultimate result would be the abandonment of the steam locomotive.

This is a phase of the question that might have been anticipated, but it has evidently come upon advocates of electrification as a surprise. However, the opposition does not arise altogether from the fear that the change from steam to electricity will deprive the locomotive engineers and firemen of employment, although this is, perhaps, its most important factor. One of the prominent officers of the Brotherhood of Railia. Trainmen, another order that probably will assist in combating the change, is quoted as saying: "We handle about 15,000 freight cars a day in the Chicago yards with 213 train crews. What chance do you suppose we would have

with a third rail?" Another view from the employees' side is that even though many of the present locomotive engineers and firemen would be retained in the service, the change would cut their wages in two. "We admit we have a selfish interest in opposing this movement," said one of the men, frankly. And yet, the very fact that the movement has taken its present form makes it clear that it has gone forward beyond the power of any man, or organization of men, or combination of interests, to stay it.

As in all cases where radical changes in industrial methods play a part, individuals suffer hardship during the period of readjustment. So it has been following the introduction of all forms of labor-saving machinery. The adoption of the typesetting machine threw thousands of men temporarily out of employment. It is impossible to speak with regard to every case, but in general it may be said that the printers who were driven from their cases were permanently benefited by the innovation.

It will be so in the present instance. Other vocations will call for the efforts and energies of the intelligent and industrious men who compose the vast majority in the railroad brotherhoods, and in the end, in common with the rest of us, they will be all the better for the elimination of smoke.

American Goods for Liberia AFTER the singular expedition to Liberia that some time ago kept the world wondering whether the United States had any designs on the West African republic it was confidently expected that American trade with that part of the world would attain large proportions. But while the demand for American goods in Liberia very greatly increased through the visit of that cominission, nothing whatever appears to have been done to meet this demand. The American charge d'affaires at Monrovia takes up the subject in a most illuminating report, which sets forth the excellent market a number of American manufacturers find in Liberia and calls attention to the exceptional opportunity offering at this time, for "there is not only a strong feeling of renewed attachment and regard for the American people and American goods among the 60,000 or more America-Liberians, but it is astonishing how widely this feeling and demand are diffused among the 2,500,000 or more of the aboriginal population of the republic."

But Liberia has far more than a mere local importance. Its geographical situation at the entrance to the gulf of Guinea, on the extremity of West Africa, midway between the mouths of the Niger and Senegal, gives the republic all the more prominence as that part of the world is now rapidly being opened up by France and England. Furthermore, Liberia is the only part of Africa which is not dooned to ultimate absorption by one of the colonial powers, provided the United States continues to take an interest in its welfare. But ito preserve Liberia without developing it would be useless and certainly not in keeping with the demands of our age, for the little republic cannot possibly remain outside the scope of African development for any length of time. That a steamship line should be established and could be run with good profit between New York and Monrovia is the excellent measure the American representatives advocate. American cargoes of tinned provisions, dry goods, boots and shoes, tools, garden and agricultural implements, furniture, cotton goods, haberdashery, kerosene, could be exchanged for such Liberian products as ivory, rubber, ginger, cocoa, various seeds, beans, and especially many exquisite woods from the great forests known to be among the richest in all West Africa.

Once regular communication were established, American enterprise would not be slow to see the great opportunities Liberia offers as a commercial foothold in West Africa against the fast approaching time when French and British colonization shall have made the interior of the Guinea coast, the Senegal, Gambia and Niger valleys, not only accessible but as busy and prosperous as many better known and more favored regions, and there seems to be no good reason why Americans should not become the pioneers of West Africa, along with the British and French, by pushing a railroad into the rich hinterland of Liberia.

ON JULY 31, 1858, a steamboat was launched below the falls at Oregon City, Ore. It was called the Carrie Ladd, for the wife of William Ladd. This was one of the first, if not the very first, of the steamboats that have plowed the waters of the new Northwest, and there is great curiosity throughout the Puget Sound region to learn what finally became of her.

No doubt much that is said concerning the prosperity of the western farmer is taken in other parts of the country, and especially in the East, with a good deal of reservation. The pictures drawn of luxurious farm mansions and the stories told of farmers who go to town in automobiles, who send their children to the great universities and whose wives buy oriental rugs; and the tales told of farmers who, instead of borrowing money from the county banks to move their money from the county banks to move their crops as formerly, now have controlling interests in many of those banks and are among the regular buyers of gilt-edged securities, are often received as interesting additions to our stock of current fiction rather than as prosaic statements of fact.

In "the

Capitalistic

Region"

In all probability Senator Aldrich, who until he entered upon a tour of the West a short time ago had not seen that country for years, may have entertained considerable doubt with regard to its reported phenomenal progress. In his Omaha speech he told of visiting southern Kansas in 1881 and of the impression the trip made upon him. Said he, "I would not have given fifty cents for the whole territory that I saw after I left Kansas City. It was marked in my mind and in the old geographies as the 'great American desert'!"

And so it was marked in the minds of thousands of others. Not so late as 1881, but not so many years earlier, it was generally believed that trees would not grow in Kansas. It was regarded as a barren land. "But now," said Senator Aldrich, "the country is flourishing like a green bay tree, and they told me in Kansas City the story of a man who came into one of the banker's offices there about the time of which I speak and wanted to borrow $1000 to put a roof on his barn, or something of that kind. The other day this same man came into the same office and said he desired to invest $50,000 in good securities."

In the brief span of a generation a man who started out by borrowing $1000 had become a capitalist. "And as nearly as I can make out," said the senator, "every farmer in Nebraska and Kansas and all this territory is a capitalist. This is the capitalistic region of the country."

It is well to have this testimony. It is especially timely now, when much more than is necessary, and much more than is justifiable, is being said in relation to the need of a "rural uplift." Where intelligent farming is practised in this country, whether in Maine or Missouri, Kansas or Massachusetts, the farmer is independent, the farmer's family is well cared for, and the surroundings of the farmer's children are as good as those of children of the same station in the city.

Thanks to education, the failures of rural life are becoming fewer every year. There is a better understanding today of the soil and its possibilities than ever there has been before, and this understanding is not confined to any exclusive class, because it is being diffused widely by the agricultural department and the agricultural colleges. At present there is a tendency toward, the soil and away from the city. Its encouragement will be of lasting benefit to those who are hesitating and of lasting benefit to the country.

The Parcels Post Question Again A RESOLUTION adopted by the Farmers' National Congress in Raleigh, N. C., last week urging upon the national Legislature the enactment of laws modernizing the parcels post service in accordance with recommendations made by successive postmastergenerals, serves to bring this matter up for discussion once more. That there is powerful opposition to the proposal for a parcels post in this country is plain. Nothing less than an influence sufficiently potent to offset the recommendations of cabinet officers and the expressed sympathy of presidents could have succeeded thus far in burying the parcels post bills in committee.

It would be neither wise nor fair to condemn this influence as altogether selfish, mercenary or dishonest. Thousands of people whose integrity cannot rightfully be questioned are opposed to the parcels post proposition, and for various reasons. One reason is that its effect, no matter what its intention, would be to lead the government into the express business. Another reason is that since the government has not made letter carrying pay its way it would not be likely to make package carrying self-supporting; hence the postoffice department deficit would be greatly and, perhaps, harmfully increased. Another reason is, because the government will be doing very well if it shall attend properly to purely governmental affairs, allowing private enterprise to solve industrial problems. Still another reason is, that the establishment of a parcels post system would mean the building up of mail-order houses at the cost of practically exterminating the small merchants of the country towns and cross-roads, and of injuring the retail business in general.

It can be said, perhaps, that the express interests are the greatest foes of the proposal, the mail-order interests its greatest friends; but if there is behind one a long line of opponents who have in view only considerations of public welfare, there is also behind the other a long line of supporters who are moved entirely by a like impulse.

At present the proposal takes the form of two alternative projects. The first is that we shall adopt for our domestic service the parcels post system now attached to our foreign postal service. This would enable patrons of the postoffice to send packages up to eleven pounds in weight at twelve cents a pound to any part of the United States. The present rate for packages in the United States is sixteen cents a pound, and the present weight limit is four pounds. The other project has reference exclusively to the carrying of parcels over the rural free delivery routes, and it is intended to overcome the objection raised on the score of mail-order house monopoly by confining the transmission of the packages between points on the same rural routes, the rate to be five cents for the first pound and two cents for each additional pound or fraction thereof, making the charge for carrying a parcel of the maximum weight twenty-five cents. This would be of such manifest benefit to farmers that its extension would follow as a matter of course.

For the latter reason, the probability is that when this question comes up for settlement it will come up in its most comprehensive form. It cannot be disposed of even temporarily with regard to the interests of any particular class, for the postoffice is for all classes. The matter is one that calls for cautious statesmanship, that the federal government may not be used to advance the interests of some or to impair the interests of others.
